Christian Uva, Professor of Cinema and History at the University Roma Tre, will discuss the relationship between cinema and terrorism in Italy, concentrating on the political violence of the 1970s.

Professor Uva's lecture, which is part of Professor Federico Luisetti's course Turmoil: Italian Literature, Culture and Politics in the 1960s and 1970s, will document the efforts by both popular and art cinema to express and interpret the tensions that have destabilized Italy through political violence, terrorism, massacres, and subversive plans.
